This Blueprint represents the stories, perspectives, and suggestions of an eclectic group of educators, economists, evolutionary scientists, transformation facilitators, and system designers who met online over 6 months under the banner of r3.0, for exploring educational transformation for a regenerative and distributive economy of thrivable civilizations. This Blueprint signifies a major milestone for r3.0 and offers a radically new approach for catalyzing systemic transformational change. The purpose for this Blueprint is to inspire and support the necessary transformation of education as well as the facilitation of transformative learning.

For education to become regenerative and thrivable, a major shift in attitude, behaviour, worldviews, and consciousness is required. Accordingly, this Blueprint offers a journey of heart and mind combined, written in such a way that people from all backgrounds, cultures, and ages can benefit from all it offers. The main framework of the Blueprint consists of 7 unique and interconnected Learning Perspectives. These Learning Perspectives have been carefully designed to shift our consciousness states into an experiential learning mode, through which a more integral understanding can naturally emerge. It is our intention and conviction that we can each become catalysts for our personal and societal transformation. And it is precisely this innate and systemic transformative potential that this Blueprint aims to activate, develop, and nurture.
